

Syllabus for Sociolinguistics in TEFL
Spring Semester, 2025
F. Kazemeini

Course Objectives:

The purpose of this course is to deepen the PhD students' understanding of the theoretical frameworks and current issues in Sociolinguistics with a wide range of backgrounds. The course primarily intends to provide new insights into the scholarly investigation through the coherent integration of materials introducing concepts like language variation, languages in contact, sociolinguistics, and education, bilingualism, multilingualism, etc. The reading list will be chosen from the following materials and/or those that are available in the library or searched and taken from internet sources. The topics presented are arranged into sixteen 2 hours sessions to be delivered in a four-month semester.
